“Hocus Pocus Viewing Party”

Planned Event Portfolio

★INTRODUCTION★

This paper will highlight my planned event for the Roxy Regional Theatre. On October 26, 2025 I am hosting a Hocus Pocus-themed party that leads up to the showing of the film. Before the showing, the house and lobby will be reimagined into a themed Halloween experience, complete with a special candle craft for kids, a unique witch's brew punch, and a costume party!

The Artistic Director of the Roxy wanted to throw a party to draw extra attention to our film festival which is sponsored by a local bank. The Roxy is about to undergo a lengthy renovation period so we will be meeting in a much smaller space and would like to retain the programming we have during that period but need the funding to do so. By highlighting Hocus Pocus specifically, we knew it would appeal to both younger and older audiences!

My original idea was to feature another event I'm currently planning (two performance showcases) but it falls outside the dates specific to this assignment. I was able to quickly pivot when I addressed the issue with my Artistic Director who immediately suggested the film series party, as the board had previously discussed wanting to draw more attention to the program. To plan this event, I was fortunate enough to have a date chosen for me, the film paid for, a building to hold it in, a full staff, and a budget of $100 to pull it off.

In order to plan the same event on a larger scale, section MARKETING PLAN in this paper is for ideally holding an upscaled version of the event in October of 2026.

★Event Planning Sketch★

Problem statement: We would like to promote our film series to continue receiving funding, as we would need to discontinue the series without the funding the organization relies on.

Possible Solutions:

1. We could throw a costume party and play trivia to promote community involvement.
2. We throw a cocktail party in the lobby and have a craft for kids in the house to give the adults some time to relax and/or mingle.
3. We could have crafts for kids, a costume party, and an updated look for the movie theme.

Idea to pursue:

I've decided to go with having crafts for kids, a costume party before the movie, and an updated look so the experience feels more immersive. By providing a memorable experience for both the kids and the adults, we can guarantee they will want to return which allows us to continue hosting the film festival.

Mission Statement:

By heightening awareness of our film festival by our elevated showing of Hocus Pocus, we can guarantee funding to help the film series continue.

Goal:

To see the kids enjoy their crafts and for positive feedback from parents.

Objective:

I will be hosting the event on Sunday, October 26, 2025 at the Roxy. The party starts at 1:00pm with a costume contest at 1:45pm and Hocus Pocus (film) starting promptly at 2:00pm.

★MARKETING PLAN★

Event Name: "Hocus Pocus Viewing Party"

Event Details: We will be providing an immersive Hocus Pocus-inspired atmosphere with trivia, a special witch's brew punch, a DIY candle project for the kids, and a costume contest before each showing; a Q&A session with voice actor Jason Marsden immediately following the 7:00 film showing.

Introduction: We are inviting the public to join us for a Hocus Pocus-themed party before our two showings of the film to promote awareness of our film festivals by offering various activities to accompany the film as well as an audience Q&A session with voice actor Jason Marsden.

1. Key Event Marketing Goals

- To sell out both showings.
  - Increase social media presence a month prior to event.
  - Include event flier in other event programs.

- To draw interest in future film series.
  - Give the public an open suggestion option for films.
  - Center certain film series around specific celebratory months/celebrations.

- Use visibility & event success as motivator for continued support.
  - Current year's event strengthens relationship with film series sponsor, Planter's Bank.
  - Build local community excitement over event for all ages.

2. Key Target Audiences

Primary target audience:

Millenials with kids. Hocus Pocus is a film most millenials grew up on and since most millenials are around 40 they have kids that they've also raised on it. We currently have 55 kids under 18 taking classes at our organization and 50% of our programming is geared toward kids that fall directly into the age group where their parents are of millenial-age. We have families of all income brackets but many of them are military. They are very supportive of our youth programming and trustworthy of those running the theater, as we are all similar in age as most of the parents.

Secondary target audience:

- Horror/Halloween fans! Not only do we have a downtown that goes overboard for Halloween, but our very own art designer also opened up her own goth-inspired store in town so she's constantly promoting our events. She is providing us with some Hocus Pocus-inspired decor for the event as well and has been spreading the word at her store. This group of people show up for all Rocky Horror performances and are the main demographic for purchasing art from our gallery.

3. Key Messages and Brand

Brand Examples:

- Our event image will always be bright orange and in contrast to the background
- Each visual announcement will include stars (★) as bullet points for visuals
- Headshot of guest actor on all imagery to include "Jason Marsden, Voice of Thackery Binx"

Key Message Examples:

- October 26, 2026 at Roxy Regional Theater.
- Event will be a fun-packed day for kids and adults of all ages
- DIY Black Flame Candle kit for only $5, Witch's Brew Punch (special adult potions available for adults/wizards/witches), trivia/movie facts, costume contest 15min prior to each showing, and a spooky setting for all your Halloween pictures.
- Q&A Session with voice actor James Marsden (voice of Thackery Binx the cat!) following the 7:00 film showing.
- Book early as tickets are limited.
- Free parking!

4. Marketing Support and Partnerships

We have partnered with Planter's Bank to fund our film series so they are promoting the event, as is The Ghoul Haus, a local goth-inspired store owned by one of our resident artists. In addition, our organization constantly promotes via social media, signage, and word-of-mouth.

I. Media Plan (non-paid/editorial)

Key Media Contacts

While we continue our relationships with Planter's and Ghoul Haus, I'd like to include two local businesses that are key demographics to a lot of our programming: AndVinyl Records and Rick's Comic City. They constantly come up in conversation at the theater and I'm not even aware they know we are such supporters of theirs. A music-inspired film series with AndVinyl as well as a comic book-inspired film series with Rick's would go over super well and would benefit all organizations involved so I'd like to include them in the event's publicity to encourage relationships with one another.

J. Marketing Partners Plan

Outside Planter's Bank and The Ghoul Haus, I'd like to make sure the following businesses & organizations are made aware of our event:

Date	Marketing	Who	Information to be included
10.01.26-10.08.26 (all)	Drop off fliers and email organization with event information.	Yada on Franklin	Guest artist, time, location, cost, contest (all)

7. Tourism Marketing Plan

The event will highlight the Roxy and will give people a reason to visit us by paying close attention to the following:

- To highlight the historical theater that has been a central part of the community since 1913
- To highlight a celebrity appearance in Clarksville/Montgomery County
- Social media posts to recommend DoubleTree by Hilton-Clarksville for lodging as its within walking distance from event and is where we hold our galas
- To encourage community participation through shared interest in film
- ClarksvilleNow has outreach of over 500k users online per month so their contact is highly valuable.
- If the event continues to sell out we will strengthen our relationship with our current sponsor as well as hoping to form new partnerships that elevate the experience.

8. Marketing Evaluation Plan

I want to keep the evaluation plan simple by sending out follow-up emails to the email addresses on file from ticket purchases asking about their experience by providing them with a questionnaire link. By the time the film series begins (several weeks before the big party) I'd like the film series to have its own page on our website so the public can see how our newly annual event fits into the lineup. I'd like a follow-up story post on Instagram and Facebook, both thanking those who came and including the link from the mailing. All follow-up blasts to occur at start of business the following morning. Send reports to Planters Bank following social media blast and thank them for their continued support.

9. Summary of Marketing Plan

DATE	Activity	Instagram	Facebook	Email
09.15.26	Place order for poster printing and make fliers.	N/A	N/A	N/A
10.01.26	Fliers & posters, mailings, social media posts for event begin. Signage on marquis goes up.	ZW (& all applicable below)	ZW (& all applicable below)	ZW (& all applicable below)

10.26.26	EVENT
10.27.26	Post-event thank yous, thank sponsor, include quality photos.

10. Marketing Budget

My marketing budget is incredibly simple, simply because my venue has many expenditures covered due the nature of it being a theater. Beyond printing out the fliers and making posters for the event, we already have the marquis signage and everything else is done for free online or through word-of-mouth. I feel this level of outreach would easily sell us out of both viewings and it would be a great success for our organization and our community!

Expenditure	Location	Cash Budget	In-Kind Budget	Actual (YTD)
One (1) ream of copy paper	Copies in a Flash	$6.00		$6.00
20 18”x24” posters	Copies in a Flash	$70.00		$70.00
TOTAL		$76.00
Income
Marketing Budget	Roxy Regional Theater	$76.00		$76.00
TOTAL		$76.00

★EVALUATION PLAN★

Rationale: My event is centered around the film Hocus Pocus due to its placement in our Halloween film series. A local bank is sponsoring the series for Halloween and Christmas so the artistic director asked if I could throw an event to draw attention to the film series as a whole. Our hope is that financial sponsorship continues so we can eventually plan on selling them all out and branching out to create more relationships in our community. I also want to know about ticket sale demographics and activities but my main evaluation will be in the faces of the kids and adults attending the event.

Purpose: The purpose of this evaluation is to continue receiving funding due to the success of the film series but it goes a little further than that for me. While our organization does a lot of children’s programming, I'm interested in seeing how many pre-made craft candle kits for kids we sell. I’m interested in seeing the ratio of adults to children as well as what the alcohol to craft kit purchase ratio looks like. I’d like to take this information and apply it to future film choices so we can properly connect with what our audiences want to see.

Key Evaluation Questions: How many tickets did we sell out of a full house? How many kids' candle craft kits did we sell? How much did we sell in concessions? How many punches did we add alcohol to? Are we still receiving funding? (EOY question) Did we make any profit? I want to know how their experience was, how the kids enjoyed their candle craft, if they enjoyed the environment, and if they'll be back again.

Evaluation Design: I will be able to answer the first set of questions by looking at our detailed food & bev sales as well as our ticket sales, as it is a ticketed event. Craft kits and alcohol shots are all included and monitored. The only catch is its a general seating event which means there are no differences between adult & child seating so I'm hoping my eyes and the craft kit sales for kids will be telling the same story. The questions for those who attended need to be open-ended. Instead of a scale or even providing genre options, people need to be heard so I'd like to hear what they have to say without any prompts besides the questions and some lines to write on. If this is unattainable this year, I would like to implement it next year.

Data Collection Method: While I ultimately wish the film series had its own page with an input box of our own, sending out a SurveyMonkey link would give me the ability to ask what I want while giving them the freedom to respond easily and/or anonymously. My preferred way of going about this is to send out the link the morning after the event that includes PHOTOS from the event along with the link. I feel this will really personalize it for them and show them the extra time and care we're willing to put in to make our programming a little better than the rest. I also would like to send photos and results to Planter's Bank, the event's sponsor.

Potential Survey Questions:

Did you enjoy your time with us at the Roxy?

Did the changed environment enhance your experience?

Would you consider coming back to see another movie with us?

What kind of films would you like to see?

Would you prefer a kids-free movie series?

Do you find this a more affordable option for something you could do regularly with your family?

What other changes could we make to improve your next visit during our holiday series?

★CONTRIBUTORS★

This event has major contributors and revenue sources that greatly assisted in making this event happen. In the most direct sense, Planters Bank is the sponsor of the film festival and covers the cost of the film rental. The revenue generated covers the staff and operational costs to keep the program ongoing. In a more indirect sense, the Roxy employs a full time staff that are scheduled during event times to ensure smooth operations.

★CONCLUSION★

When my original concept fell through due to time constraints, I quickly contacted my Artistic Director and was able to find an alternative event rather easily. While I was already in progress of the previous event (still ongoing), being adaptable enough to add another event of a completely different nature was a lesson I needed to learn in real time for myself. This event not only made clear how important adaptability is in event planning, but how important it is to communicate when you are faced with a new problem.

While I was given a budget of $100 to invest in decor for the event, contacting the Ghoul Haus to lend us larger pieces for the lobby gave me an added sense of pride in the event, as I felt using my outside resources and relationships enriched the experience as well as the experience of feeling it myself for the first time. When my original plan was abandoned, I immediately formed a new Work Breakdown Structure and Problem Statement which was incredibly beneficial in restructuring the direction of my entire event. By creating a timeline for a future event, the importance of scheduled and detailed tasks proved to be immensely beneficial as well, as it has solidified how I will be approaching event planning in the future.

Knowing your audience was the driving factor in choosing this particular film. I chose to follow my Artistic Director's recommendation due to millennials with kids being our primary audience base, which I'm so glad I did. We had determined what I would be looking for in advance (ticket sales, craft kits, concessions, feedback, etc.) so when our debriefing meeting was held, I had everything lined right up which made it easier to plan from the beginning.

This event gave me the feeling of what it means to reach out and do something extra for your community. Seeing the kids having fun painting their candles and hearing the adults comment on how amazing the theater looked was honestly all I needed as a true evaluation. If I can continue providing experiences like these, not only will our organization flourish, but so will our wonderful community I'm proud to be a part of.
